SUMMARY

A secured storage area is located approximately 18 kilometers (km) west-northwest of Zhitomir and 60 km east-southeast of Novograd-Volynskiy (Figure 1). It is situated about halfway between the Zhitomir--Novograd-Volynskiy railroad and an all-weather highway, and is connected to the main rail and road routes.

The storage installation (Figures 2 and 3) covers about 190 acres and an adjacent support area covers approximately 59 acres. The storage site is fenced and has an outer firebreak, two access roads, and a rail spur.

The main installation contains 55 storage buildings, a probable POL storage area, and eight support buildings. The adjacent support area contains one probable administration building/barracks and 13 support buildings.

The installation was first observed in [REDACTED] several buildings were added, but earlier photo imagery does not permit a specific count of the increase in buildings.

DESCRIPTION OF INSTALLATION

Railroad Service

A spur line from the Zhitomir--Novograd-Volynskiy railroad enters the east end of the installation and appears to terminate near the center of the site.

Road Service

A branch road from the all-weather road between Novograd-Volynskiy and Zhitomir enters the east end of the installation. Another road enters the installation from the west side.

Administrative and Troop Housing Area

Area D contains one T-shaped probable administration building/barracks and 13 support buildings.

General Storage Area

Area E contains 55 storage and 8 support buildings.

POL Storage Area

Area G contains four probable semiburied tanks, each 60 feet in diameter.
